

iSaaS – Information Solutions as a Service

Gain the elastic processing flexibility you need...and spend incrementally only for services used.

Image API introduces iSaaS stands for information Solutions as a Service and provides a new, lower cost operational framework for delivering superior services. This new model balances the reality of varying workloads, capacity fluctuations, and staffing restrictions, with the need for greater productivity, customer service, and reduced spending. Companies can now reengineer strained business processes while gaining the elastic processing flexibility needed and only invest incrementally for services used to meet today's challenging market.

iSaaS is a combination of information centric software subroutines, hosting options, customized processing services, and professional management services. The combination of these core competencies and the ability to use them individually or as “droplets” to form your agency's cloud of services gives you the control to design the best business process solution for your particular requirements.

Today's market conditions are forcing people to look at all alternatives to the current way you conduct business. iSaaS allows you to outsource varying portions of a problematic information intensive process that has become too costly to continue to conduct in house without losing control. Examples:

As the markets tighten and the need for improved service levels increases, consider the iSaaS approach to solving operational problems.
